Download Acrobat XI Professional free to the most popular and complete. download Acrobat XI Professional for Windows 7,8,8.1 & Windows Vista..I didn't think I'd be seeing anything at this time, but I keep hearing it on the news. I did a brief search and didn't find anything, but I may have missed it. The software I use is called "Profiler" and it's just a very simple app. It doesn't take over your computer like another profiler would, but it does have a lot of bells and whistles. I think it's also open source. It has a feature called "samples" that let's you record your program's execution. You can choose a percentage of time to record (at least up to 100%), and then set the "sample" percentage to be 100% of that time. You can choose which frames (or groupings of frames) you want to track as well. It also has an "evaluate" feature that lets you save and load your sample to/from a file, or you can record only the portion you want to "evaluate." If you don't want to pay for a profiler, there are a couple other options, but I haven't used them. Hope that helps. Good luck with your project. -Nathan Nov 17 2006, 08:57 AM I am using the MS Dynamic CRT (Developer) profiler. It's very good (and fast) and with the latest updates, I can load multiple test files at once. So I start loading a number of test cases (usually 10 or more), save the test files and then load them all at once. It's pretty fast. You can do other things as well, but I don't remember them. Nov 17 2006, 12:30 PM Oh, and for what it's worth, I have yet to find a real MSDN profiler that has "good" (to me anyway) "samples" of what actually happens. They're all "graphical" and/or "user" time. Nov 17 2006, 03:14 PM Karma I couldn't say for sure what you're talking about, but are you talking about the VSPerf library? I know that it's pretty good at profiling, but it's not for me. Nov 18 2006, 12:46 PM 2d92ce491b
