The Northwick Park Twenty Alcohol Questionnaire (NWPT-20) and the Research Diagnostic Criteria (RDC) were used to assess a group of 56 men admitted to a psychiatric hospital for treatment of alcoholism. The reliability of the two instruments was examined by means of Pearson's correlation coefficient. The degree of concordance between the two instruments was examined by means of kappa coefficients. The alcoholics scored on the NWPT-20 significantly higher than the non-alcoholics. The pattern of correlations was highly significant, confirming the good reliability of the NWPT-20. The level of agreement between the diagnoses based on the NWPT-20 and those based on the RDC was very high. The results indicated that the NWPT-20, in both the evaluation and the treatment of alcoholics, is as useful as the RDC.

You know you have to do it – you have to make peace with your parents. Well, that's one way of putting it. You know you have to do it – you have to become a financially responsible adult. You have to get a job and not be a freeloader. You're the last piece of the puzzle. You're the last pebble on the beach that needs to be dropped into place. So you finally do it. You get on your knees in front of your mom and dad and beg for one more chance. You'll spend every dime of your trust fund money to pay for your college education. You'll hold your breath until you finally hold your breath. It's almost time for the tick-tock of the countdown clock. It's almost time for you to break down and admit that you're still a loser. Your family is not on your side anymore, because this is their child – their first-born child. You're the son or daughter who disappointed the apple of their eye. The wronged party. That's why you don't want to play by their rules. You don't want to be the subject of their condescension. You don't want to be the 2d92ce491b
