Q: How to restore the app when an android device is stuck in Setup mode While updating an app on my Xiaomi 4a phone, it got stuck in the setup mode for 5 min. I have unplugged the phone and it didn't get recovered by itself. I need to restart the phone manually.

I am able to restore the application by using the full backup option. But I can't find the setting/issue mentioned in this link: Xiaomi 4A phone stuck in setup, when rooted, battery died How to set the recovery mode in Xiaomi 4A phone? I don't want to make a full backup.

The phone is with some images, contacts, etc. Please suggest how can I recover my app, or should I make a full backup? I have enabled USB debugging and storage access in developer options. Any response would be appreciated. Update : The Xiaomi 4A phone is in the set-up mode with the logo on my screen. I have unplugged it. I am able to restore the app when I restored the full backup. A: If you created a full backup, as I think you did (see this, and compare the file sizes), then you would get a quite fast back-up (since you don't have to backup the whole SD card). If the phone is stuck in setup mode, a full backup should be sufficient to restore the device. Q: Silverlight wait for user input Is it possible to block the Silverlight-Application and wait until user clicks a button (or mouse)? I could add a commandButton and wait for the Click-Event, but it does't seem to work as expected. Since the rest of the application should be "suspended" for the time the user is waiting for input, I guess it's not possible to block the thread. Is that right? Thanks in advance! A: Once you have a Silverlight application running on the server, there is nothing to stop you from forwarding any input from the web browser to the Silverlight
