never found a way to put it in the panel (even if it wouldn't make much sense there) more for one's desktop than being usable hehe I noticed that the networks applet always puts the tray icon on the left :P no, it's the standard if you want, you can make the tray icons with different sizes and have a column of them, so that the tray is full-width How? I mean, I don't know how to do it, you can configure it in the control center for example, it allows you to have only the active window in the tray, or only the tray icon or only the menu, etc. Ah, that sounds good if you configure it correctly, you can have icons on all four sides of the tray the configuration window can be accessed with ctrl+m in the tray There we go Seems like you could use that as a quick way to add some icons to the panel that's why I think it would be nice to have it in the panel but I never knew how Right now the size of the tray icons are pretty standard yes but it could be smaller, it could be bigger so the "standard" icon size could be arbitrary, and not really, though I'd like a way to keep the current icons, but adjust the size of the tray icon right, you could keep the old size, and resize the panel with the rest of the icons I don't like that idea it would also allow you to have a panel that is full-width and display any number of icons I just like the fact that I can customize the panel
