Liquid chromatography/mass spectrometry (LC/MS) analysis of peptides is challenging due to the complexity and high level of homologous ions generated for a single peptide ion. Therefore, it is important to reduce peptide complexity to increase the probability of identifying peptides with trypsinization prior to LC/MS. This is particularly challenging in protein mixtures where each protein is a complex mixture of charge-reduced peptides. In this work we demonstrate the applicability of embedded 3D desorption atmospheric pressure chemical ionization (3D DART-MS) for LC/MS analysis of tryptic peptides isolated from a large multi-component protein mixture. This method is capable of fingerprinting a mixture of homologous peptides under a highly selective ionization mode. The response of the complement protein to plaque formation in human aortic atherosclerosis. The objective of this work was to examine the relative complement protein deposition in normal and atherosclerotic human aorta. A 3e33713323
