To dive even deeper into the technical details of FIFA 22, Mikel Arteta, Head of FIFA on Xbox, recently had a chat with us at the FIFA 20 launch event in London. Read on to find out what is new and exciting in FIFA 22 and how player, teams and environments can be customized in unprecedented ways. FIFA 22 Gameplay and Teams Evaluating the on-field action of a football match takes different levels of expertise, so we think we've found the perfect person to share his insights: FIFA 20 on Xbox MVP Mikel Arteta. "At the heart of FIFA is the simulation and, in part, that goes to the heart of gameplay. When you first start playing as a professional player, you're after the ball. This is the game that teaches you to understand the different qualities of the ball you're given to play with. You're meant to hit it - or kick it - with the right intensity," says Arteta. "At that moment, the on-pitch action becomes something about your sense of reading and reacting. It's about anticipating where the ball will go and deciding if that's a good place for you to be, or if you need to get out of the way. What we have in FIFA is a rule that helps us to train players to understand the magnitude of that action: the space, time and momentum that the ball moves through in its flight." "So even though the sport of football is based on a very different set of rules, the game as a whole is based on a common set of premises," explains Arteta. "And what we're looking to do is create a game that has the same feeling and insight that the players get when they're working their magic on the pitch. Because we're clearly never going to be able to replicate the intense, intense pace of a high-level football match in a video game - but we can kind of try to get pretty close!" "What we can do is bring some of that physics to the game. It's not a new thing - we've done it for a long time now, but in the past we were working to bring the physics to life that the game presents on-screen, and then we would try to develop the game to match that

My link to the Internet has always been via a modem running in an internal phone socket, and a line from there to an Ethernet modem plugged into a hub on an external wall socket. Here's the typical situation. The line-cable for that socket is coiled next to a plug-cable, so it is possible to unplug a pair of items. It's not that easy with a home broadband connection. The electrician has - brilliantly - run the cable from the exchange to the hub on the roof. The cable goes through the internal stairway, and it is typically drawn into the rear of the house by a kind of electric pump system. The last metre or so of the cable extends through the gap between the wall and the side of the house, and comes to rest in the floor through a hole in the wall. We can't disconnect the cable from the phone socket. It's run through the brick wall. In the unlikely event of a fatal
